Survey your Polling Site for Accessibility

Have you ever had problems accessing your polling place? The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and Help America Vote Act (HAVA) seek to ensure that persons with disabilities have full and equal access to the voting process.

The ADA mandates that polling sites be fully accessible to persons with disabilities. The ADA requires, among other things, adequate and accessible parking, accessible entrances, and a clear path of travel both to the accessible entrance and within the polling place itself.

HAVA requires that the actual process of casting a ballot must be accessible to persons with disabilities. Alabama has chosen to address this issue through the use of a voting machine called the Automark. The Automark allows persons with various disabilities to cast a vote independently. Each polling site should have an Automark that is turned on and ready for use. In addition, there should be at least one poll worker at each site who knows how to operate the Automark and be able to assist if problems come up.

The next time you go to vote, use ADAP's simple survey to determine whether your polling place is fully accessible to persons with disabilities. If you discover access issues at your polling site, send the completed survey, along with your contact information, to ADAP for further investigation. Together, we can work to ensure all polling places in Alabama are fully accessible to ALL voters. Voting is a fundamental right we should all protect.

"NGRI"

Over the past few years, the number of people with a mental illness living and being treated in large state hospitals has declined. Many consumers are now living in group homes, assisted living facilities and nursing homes. One group of consumers faces more difficulty in successfully moving to community-based care. Persons who have been categorized as “not guilty by reason of mental illness” or “NGRI” in a prior criminal prosecution have additional barriers to overcome before being allowed to move to a less restrictive environment. ## Landmark Settlement for New York City Adult Home Residents Scattered-Site Housing, Community Services Enable Independence, Integration

A recent landmark settlement between lawyers for adult home residents, the U.S. Department of Justice and New York State ensures that thousands of residents of 23 large "adult homes"-board and care homes serving primarily people with mental illnesses-will have the opportunity to live in their own homes with the services they need to succeed and be participants in their communities.

"With this agreement, Governor Cuomo and his administration have shown a real commitment to the civil rights and dignity of adult home residents. Thousands of people with mental illness who are now stuck in institutions will have the opportunity to live full lives in the community, with the services and supports they want and need to succeed," stated Cliff Zucker, general counsel of Disability Rights New York (formerly Disability Advocates Inc.).

"With the right services, virtually all adult home residents with mental illnesses can live in their own homes and be full members of their community," stated Ira Burnim, legal director of the Judge David L. Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law. "These residents will finally have the opportunity to leave institutions and lead lives like the rest of society."

When asked how he felt about the settlement, which would provide adult home residents with mental illnesses the opportunity to live more independently, Plaintiff Raymond O'Toole answered, "Freedom is here - almost. Freedom and the ability to grow."
